CHINA. The wreck of the Isabella on the Bellona

Shoal suggests a reference to the new route from Australia to China, discovered by Captain Moreaby, in the Basilisk, and by which many of the dangers of the old route, and notably that which proved fatal to the leabella, may be avoided. The Isabella was going from Australia to China, and, no doubt, was making her way northwards, intending to pass through the Louisiade Archipelago and the Solomon Islands. and so into the Pacific. Had she taken Captain Moresby's route through "China Straits," and along the East Const of New Guinea, the ontlying dangers of New Caledonia would have been | Hongkong Fire Insurance Company's Sharesavoided. By this new route vessels leaving Australia for China will keep to the westward | China Fire Insurance Company's Shares-$150 of the present or old route until they pass the south-eastern extremity of New Guinea, when they will haul up to the northward. There appears to be no question as to the superiority of the new route, and comparative freedom from the dangers arising from the outlying recfs and shoals. The labours of Captain Moresby and his officers will hereafter be duly appreciated. It may be that a more complete survey of the waters in the neighbourhood of the D'En. ACROSS THE CHANNEL IN A CANOE Lieutenant Colville, of the Granudier Guards. vound man whose courage is only counled by his modesty, amused himself on Derby Day in a striking and original manner. Starting from Charing Cross on the Tuesday night by the Dover mail, with a light summer canceone of the Maidenhead "cockle-shells"weighing about sixty pounds, and measuring about fourteen feet in length, with a change of clothes and a bottle of cold tea, he prepared bimself for the task of paddling across the Channel. There was no mayor, no crowd, no special correspondents to see him off, his only confident being a constguard man, who had taken a rough forecast of the weather. three o'clock-daybreak on Derby morning-he started from Dover harbour, and puddled himself into Usials harbour by half past nine, doing about thirty miles zigzag across Channel in six hours and a half. His reception on the French side was not enthusiastic. He went on board the mail steamer lying ready for her mid-day passage to Dover, and was followed by a French official who demanded barbour dues in that injured tone which a Frenchman knows so well how to assume. He did not pay the dues, but changed his clothes and had his breakfast on board the steamer, returning the same day to London. As an effort of pure courage his voyage beats both Webb's and Boyton's,-World.

THE MATRIMONIAL LOTTERY. An-ingenious arithmetician at Cincinnati bas recently amused bimself by calculating, the matrimonial chances of spineters at various ages. Out of every 1,000, taken indiscriminately, of women marrying between 14 and 40, he finds the chances to be as follows :- At 14 and 15 years 32 become brides; at 16 and 17. 104; at 18 and 19, 219; at 20 and 21, 233; at 22 and 23, 165; and at 24 and 25, 102. Here there is a sudden fall, the next biennial period giving only 60 marriages; 28 and 29 years, 45; 30 and 31 18; and 32 and 33, 14. To the remaining six years only 14 lasky chances are assigned, but we are rather disposed to doubt the trustworthiness of these latter statistics. Unless American women differ very considerably from their sisters in England, it is impossible to conceive any means by which so many as 46 were induced to rok nowledge themselves past 30 years old when they entered hymeneal bonds. In all probability, those who pleaded guilty to the terrible indictment were really quite juvenile. TEMPERANON AND LONG LIFE. A curious point hus been raised about the Inited Kingdom Temporance and General Proident Institution. This society insures total stainers at a lower rate of premium than nonstuiners, and with such excellent results that calculty the expectation of deaths is above the calculty the expectation of instance, expected that 23 of the total abstainers would die in five pars and £140,000 be paid to the survivors, estend of which only 511 persons died and only 97,000 was paid. On the "general" side of se office 1,266 deaths were anticipated and 1,330 conred. Nevertheless, the general side insures for than the total abstinence; and when the mus came to be distributed there wits great issutisfaction that quite bull of it went to the imperance section. At the annual meeting is fact was dilated upon with some warmth. But the actuary at once set matters right. Ho minted out that the distribution of bouns was mere matter of arithmetic. It has nothing to with principles or practices; and then, turng round to the malcontents, "I cannot help on dying. The fact is, you die faster than ose who don't drink, or they do not die so ist as you. They are, therefore, entitled to the rger bonue." THE WIFE FOR A BRITISH SAILOR, TROM "BONG FOR SAILORS." Wan and white is the landsman's check. And weak is the landsman's hand; Of womanish work they plainly speak,
Of the safe amouth life of the land So give me the lass that for one will long That the rough dock's learned to fread. Whose hand the haul at the rope's made strong, And whose check the storm s made red; By the weak white landeman, she who'll poss, For a scaman's love, I hall her, The brave, the bold true hearted lass

Fit wife for a British sailor. Tell her she must be no seamon's wife, That he must be long away. That landy will be her hapless life. And what does the brave heart say? "If my sailor lad be from me long, The far deck doomed to tread, In the tempest his love but grows more strong. And his cheeks grow yet more red." Sad thoughts-she'll bid all such to pass, Thinking how, returned, he'll hail her. His own, his true, his longed-for lase;

Just the wife for a British sailor.

The kingdom of Servia | fled across the frontier. Milosh Obrenoconquerors speedily became Christians and members of the Eastern Church. They adopted a liturgy of their own which still remains. They have been spiritunlly directed by bishops of their own election. Their language, mixed as it is with words and idioms of the races whom they conquered, differs from other Sclavonic dialects; and thus, independently of other causes, they have remained a separate people with an individuality and character of their own. The kingdom began by being, what it has remained ever since, a frontier State. On the north, beyond the Danube, were the Pagan Huns; on the west was the Latin Church. Later on it lay between the Islam and Christianity. It formed the limit beyond which the Western Church could not push eastward or southward. The Greek Church could not advance westward; and it marked rate as Kara George, he possessed on the line caused by the subsiding wave of Mohammedan invasion. And it was subject to all the earls which belong to a frontier State, in being the battle field for centuries n of the Crescent and the Cross. As the Byzantine Empire decayed the Service power increased; the Greeks made from time to time an attempt to claim authority over the advancing kingdom. These attempts ceased act of treachery, which caused his murder, he and the independence of Servia was assured when Constantine Monomachus, in 1048, saw his great army of invasion entirely cut to pieces. After this the Servian forces steadily advanced southward, not being stopped fill they reached the Sea of Marmora, and throwing out lateral shoots of encroachment which reached as far as the Adriatic and the Black Sea. Its power culminated under Stephan Dushan, who called himself Emperor of the Roumelians, were a tiara, and ruled without dispute over nearly the whole of the Balkan Peninsula. To his reign the Servians still was forced to abdicate. They called back look back with pride and regret round his name gather the traditions, of past national greatness, he is their Solomon, their Alfred, the beginnings of a poetical literature which for sweetness, melody, and true poetic genius territory which seemed to possess every ele ment of stability; his people were united by the King of Servia; he would destroy the Empire of the East, and be himself Constantine's successor. Servia laid down arms and accepted the Moslem conquest; the Bosnians, who were of the Patavene heresy, and could expect no mercy at all of Rome, opened their fortresses to the Turks of their own accord All the leading families in Servia became Mohammedan to save their property and lives; so much was this the case that at the present day there is not a single Servian who can trace his descent from any except the peasant class. Prince Milan is the great! grandson of a peasant; Kara Georgewitch is the grandson of a pensant. Then followed three hundred years of oppression. Servia was thoroughly subjugated by Sultan Mah. mud; it was the theatre of war for Hungary Turkey; on its soil were fought the battles of Batucsina, Nissa, Belgrade, and Groczka. When, after Prince Eugene's successes, the Treaty of Passarowitz was signed, a great part of the country was given to Austria, and when, after a few years, it was given back again to Turkey, the Sorviars rose in revolt. It was in 1737; their army of 20,000 peasants was cut to pieces, and for the next sixty years—two whole generations-their condition was hopeless indeed. No Servian was allowed to carry Although the legion of newspapers printed arms, to enter a town on horseback, to pass a Turk without a salute; they had no rights

The cruelties which followed -the slaughter of infants, the outrages on citadel of Belgrade—these are things which happened within the memory of men still living, and are fresh in the Servian mind Once more the people rose. Milash led them. He had much of Kara George's ability, and more prudence. After fifteen years of varying fortune, the independence of the country was virtually secured again. The Turks, by the Treaty of 1830, were to hold six fortresses, but were not to be seen in any other part of the country; there was to be no interference in Servian affairs; tribute was to be maid yearly, and Milosh was recognised by the Porte as Prince of Servia.
